

FRANCIS REINS, DUBLIN BANKER, ENDS LIFE HERE

President of Defunct Southern Exchange Bank Sends Bullet Into His Brain Thursday.

SUICIDE IS VERDICT OF CORONER'S JURY

Relatives State That Reins Had Said That He Could Not Return Home and Face Depositors.

Despondent over his own financial condition and the affairs of the defunct Southern Exchange bank, of Dublin, Ga., of which he was president, Francis B. Reins, 35, Thursday afternoon committed suicide by sending a bullet through his brain in his room at a downtown hotel shortly after 3 o'clock.

Coroner Paul Donohoe empaneled a jury and completed the inquest within an hour after Reins shot himself. In addition to the testimony of close friends and relatives, only one other witness was called. That was Ella Beall, negro maid at the hotel, who heard the shot fired and rushed into the room to find the banker lying in a pool of blood. The verdict was suicide.

Once Lived in Atlanta. Reins, one of the youngest bank presidents in the state, formerly held a high position in the general offices of a local about ten years ago to accept an executive position with the Southern Exchange bank.

"The bank prospered under his management for some years, finally experiencing difficulties during the depression of 1921 and 1922, when, for its own protection, the institution took over two other smaller banks under a three-year contract," a relative of Reins told the Constitution after the inquest.

"About two months ago the state banking department closed the bank with the explanation that such inroads had been made upon its capital stock as to make this action imperative. Its books were being audited and Reins had high hopes of being able to perfect a reorganization, but his expectations met first one reverse then another," a close relative and friend told a Constitution reporter just after the inquest.

Reins had been in Atlanta about nine days, it was stated. During this time he had been in daily communication with officials of the state banking department trying to help in the audit of the bank's affairs. He also was trying to form other connections, having lost everything he had when his bank was closed, it was said.

Delays Going Home. He was supposed to have returned to Dublin last Saturday, but decided to remain here a few days longer in an effort in the interest of the bank, his relatives stated.

"Wednesday night we carried him to the depot and thought he was going home. However, his train was late and while waiting, he changed his mind again, going to the hotel where he killed himself. So far as we can learn, he only left his room once during the day."

It had been noticed for several months that Reins suffered spells of severe depression, and a close watch was being kept by relatives and friends.

To one of his kinsmen he made the remark that he couldn't stand to return to Dublin and face depositors of the bank and have them ask "What can we expect? When will we get our money?"

Reins was indicted by the Laurens county grand jury following the bank's closing in January and was placed under bonds aggregating several thousand dollars.

In addition to his widow and three small children—Alice, Mary and Francis, Jr.—he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Fannie B. Reins, of Atlanta.

The body is at the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. Funeral arrangements will not be completed until arrival of his family from Dublin.

RADICAL SENATORS ALLOWED TO KEEP THEIR PATRONAGE

Washington, March 12.—Senate republicans in conference today decided against a proposal for reduction of the patronage of four insurgents, read out of the party columns and removed from their former ranks on the standing committees.

There was a suggestion that, since these senators had been given treatment in committee assignments as though they had been elected on a ticket other than the republican, there should be a reduction in their allowances for personal appointments to fill positions in and around the capitol.

ORGANIZATIONS MAKE CITY AND STATE APPEALS FOR PEACE WELCOME HEAD IN MEMORIAL RANKS OF MACY FIRM

Paul St. Gaudens Advises Cathedral Trustees Defend Sculptor :: Gutzon Borglum's Recall

"I think they had better get Borglum back." That sentence sums up a lengthy letter to The Constitution Thursday from Paul St. Gaudens, noted American sculptor who has been mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Borglum, and who wrote from Camden, N. C.

Mr. St. Gaudens defended Mr. Borglum against charges that work on the memorial has not progressed in keeping with expenditures. He stated that a life-size head executed by an expert sculptor would cost $1,500 and might take a year to carve, and added that if this were compared with the size of the Stone Mountain project, a mathematician would evolve a solution in cost that would approximate the combined debts of her allies to the United States. The time involved would also surprise the most sanguine calculator, he said.

"From the ethics of the sculptor's profession," he wrote, "Mr. Borglum was entirely justified in doing what he felt best with his models—unless there was some special clause in the contract covering that point. Nothing but the completed work belongs to the purchasers. Models are the patterns from which the artist works."

New and interesting light on the widely-discussed incident in New York years ago when Mr. Borglum is alleged to have demolished in a fit of temper faces of the angels in the cathedral of St. John the Divine, was afforded by a telegram to The Constitution Thursday from R. E. Jones, secretary of the fabric committee of the famous cathedral.

Trustees of the cathedral are said to have objected to the female faces and Mr. Borglum is reported to have humorously replied that "he did not know that male seraphs had a corner on the angel market."

Thereupon, he is said to have altered. Continued on Page 3, Column 2.

DEATH BLOW DEALT LEAGUE PROTOCOL BY GREAT BRITAIN

Coolidge Now Is Free To Proceed With Plan for Conference Upon World Disarmament.

Geneva, March 12.—The way is clear for President Coolidge to proceed with his plans for a disarmament conference. The net result of one of the most critical days in the history of the league of nations was: 1. The league security protocol is dead, killed by Great Britain and her dominions.

2. America now is free to assume world leadership in the next move toward disarmament.

3. That Austen Chamberlain and Aristide Briand will no longer arrive back in London and Paris than negotiations will begin for a security pact.

Progress Checked to September. From the league viewpoint, all progress toward world-wide security, as well as all preparation for a disarmament conference, has been checked until the league assembly meeting in September. At that time, after observing what Coolidge and Chamberlain have been able to accomplish toward disarmament, the league will endeavor to solve what remains of the problem on the basis of a general protocol, compelling arbitration and providing for regional defensive alliances.

League members are counting on the solid support of South America as well as on the bulk of the remainder of the world to alter Chamberlain's announcement that Britain is opposed to obligatory arbitration.

Italy Supports Chamberlain. After the initial shock of Chamberlain's speech, declaring that Britain could not accept the protocol, league members recovered somewhat when it developed that Italy was the only country supporting him. Japan and Sweden are withholding their final decisions, while France, Belgium, Spain, Brazil, Uruguay and Czechoslovakia unreservedly supported the protocol and opposed Britain.

Britain and the dominions roughly grasped the potentially most important fruit of the league's five years of labor and crushed it. The action was without the official sanction or spoken approval of the league.

WORK ON EASTER GOWNS IS HALTED AS UNIONS STRIKE

New York, March 12.—Work on orders for Easter dresses in 2,000 shops here was at a standstill today as manufacturers and the cloak and dress unions remained deadlocked in their wage dispute. The unions are standing upon a contract signed by both groups late in February which provided for a 10 to 15 per cent wage increase.

The workers are occupying their usual places in the shops, but are doing no work, thus preventing some far enough already in "disciplining" these senators for their failure to support President Coolidge in the election last year.

BORGLUM TO MEET ATLANTA BUSINESS MEN, SAYS REPORT

Personnel of Delegation Not Announced—Atlanta Association Is Not Represented, It Is Said.

"Mr. Borglum's angels stand serenely in their places at our cathedral," the New York man wired. "The sculptor's relations with the trustees were amicable throughout."

This message will be of interest to all who have followed the progress of the controversy between the Stone Mountain Memorial association and Mr. Borglum which had its inception in destruction of models of the central group, claimed by the organization to have been its valuable property, and by Mr. Borglum to have been his property and to have been useless.

Soon after Mr. Borglum smashed the Stone Mountain models, interviews and statements issued in Atlanta charged that the sculptor furiously demolished faces of the angels of his works in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. These reports were given widespread emphasis, and the telegram to The Constitution from Mr. Jones doubtless results from this fact.

The message brings convincing denial to reports which in substance were to the effect that Mr. Borglum has been a source of discord wherever he has been employed.

Later information shows that the facts in the case are that Borglum, in executing his contract to carve the St. John the Divine angels, modeled them with female faces in order—as he explained—that their faces might be expressed as sweetness of character.

Trustees of the cathedral are said to have objected to the female faces and Mr. Borglum is reported to have humorously replied that "he did not know that male seraphs had a corner on the angel market."

Thereupon, he is said to have altered. Continued on Page 3, Column 2.

PIVOTAL POINT REACHED IN TRIAL ON TEAPOT DOME

Admission of Banking Records of Fall Brings Snarl About "Double Hearsay" Evidence.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Cheyenne, Wyo., March 12.—Hitting the high spots for the first time since the trial began, attorneys in the Teapot Dome lease annulment case today brought out the "pivotal point" in the afternoon and then wound up the case in such a tangle of objections, technicalities and contentions that Judge Kennedy abruptly adjourned court in the middle of the afternoon in order to give government lawyers time to get a fresh start.

The principal developments were these: The question of admitting bank account records of Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, who leased Teapot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil company, to show an exchange of Liberty bonds between Sinclair and Fall, was taken under advisement by Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy.

J. W. Lacey, of defense counsel, objected to the testimony of A. J. Conway, cashier of the federal reserve branch bank of Denver, on the ground that it was "double-hearsay," because Conway himself did not actually make the records to which he testified.

TRIAL OF STOKES WILL END TODAY

Aged Millionaire Painted by Lawyer as Obsessed by Idea His Wife Had Done Something Wrong.

Chicago, March 12.—The trial of W. E. D. Stokes, 73-year-old New York millionaire, and Robert F. Lee, Chicago negro, charged with conspiracy to defame Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, will end tomorrow afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock.

C. F. Rathbun, counsel for Mr. Stokes, addressed the jury three and one-half hours today after Milton D. Smith, assistant state's attorney, had ended a conviction plea of the same length. Tomorrow Rathbun must conclude his argument by 11 a. m., after which W. W. Smith, assistant state's attorney, will be given approximately an hour and a half to close for the prosecution.

After M. D. Smith had concluded his arraignment of Mr. Stokes as a dollar-marked octopus, with tentacles which reached into the old underworld of Chicago and elsewhere to "dirty up" his wife in an effort to bolster his case.

Jesse Isidor Straus and Associates Are Honor Guests at Banquet at Biltmore Hotel.

NEW EPOCH SEEN IN CITY BUSINESS

Prominent Atlanta Citizens Pay Tribute to Candler, Macy Firm, and Davison-Paxon-Stokes.

Welcomed to Atlanta by the city's most representative business men, by the governor of Georgia, by the mayor of Atlanta and by leading federal officials Jesse I. Straus, head of R. H. Macy & Co., great New York department store, Thursday night officially confirmed statements that his company will establish a magnificent department store here, assured Atlanta people that he and his associates have unbounded confidence in the business future of this city and pledged the best efforts of his organization to work for the up-building and expansion of this city.

Speaking at a banquet given at the Biltmore hotel Mr. Straus expressed the belief that Atlanta today faces the greatest era of her growth and declared that his business organization, which is one of the largest in the world, has the highest hopes for Atlanta and declared that he and his brothers who will be associated with Davison-Paxon-Stokes company in the new enterprise are convinced that these hopes will be realized.

New Epoch Is Seen. Other speakers declared that the coming of Macy Brothers to Atlanta, made possible through negotiations by Colonel F. J. Paxon, of Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, of Davison-Paxon-Stokes company, Asa G. Candler and associates, meant the beginning of a new business epoch in Atlanta. They paid tribute to the far-sighted business judgment of the Straus brothers and praised the patriotism, public spirit and enterprise of the Davison-Paxon-Stokes executives and of Mr. Candler in sponsoring a deal which will bring to Atlanta a six-story department store building at the corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets, making possible a $6,000,000 construction development on the part of Mr. Candler.

Mell R. Wilkinson, head of the President's club, presided at the dinner which was given in honor of Mr. Straus, Edmond E. Wise, general counsel and director of R. H. Macy & Co., in the ownership and management of the LaSalle and Koch department store of Toledo, Ohio. President Wilkinson turned the meeting over to Colonel Paxon after his opening speech, declaring that the affair was a "Paxon night" as it marked the beginning of a new era for the Davison-Paxon-Stokes company in Atlanta business.

Speakers introduced by Colonel Paxon were Governor Clifford Walker, Judge Samuel L. Shibley, Mayor Candler, Jr., Robert S. Akron, Mayor Walter A. Sims, Clark Howell, of The Constitution; John S. Cohen, of The Journal; F. A. Wilson-Lawson, of The Georgian; Edmond E. Wise, J. K. Orr and Mr. Straus. Colonel Paxon expressed regret that Ed H. Luman, whose work contributed much to the success of the party, was unable to attend.

Governor Clifford Walker stated that he had nothing more to say about the highway department situation. He said he had conferred with Dr. Strahan and Dr. Strahan had told him he would decide whether or not he would accept the appointment.

WARREN'S REJECTION AGAIN BY SENATORS APPEARS PROBABLE

8-Hour Treaty Filibuster Lost by Senator Copeland

Washington, March 12.—Breaking the one-man filibuster conducted by Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, the senate tonight entered a unanimous consent agreement to vote by 3 p. m. tomorrow on the 20-year-old treaty recognizing the sovereignty of Cuba over the Isle of Pines.

Senator Copeland began his filibuster yesterday, demanding that the treaty be put aside until December, and he spoke for eight hours today almost continuously, the senate being held in session from noon until late tonight without a recess to prevent him from resting. He abandoned the filibuster suddenly at 8 p. m., yielding the floor to Senator Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota, another opponent of the treaty, who spoke only an hour.

When Senator Copeland stopped speaking, proponents attempted to force a vote tonight, but several other members insisted upon an opportunity to be heard. Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania, in charge of the treaty, then proposed the unanimous consent agreement which was adopted, limiting each member to one speech of not more than 15 minutes on the subject.

The New York senator conducted his fight from behind a steadily augmented bulwark of reference books, documents, maps and blue prints, estimated by others to contain a sufficient oratorical ammunition to last a month. He also had some crackers and raisins in his pocket and occasionally sipped broth or milk brought to him by his secretary while he spoke.

Both Senator Copeland and Senator Shipstead contended that Cuba had no claim to the island under the treaty of Paris, which ended the Spanish-American war, and the New York member insisted that, although he hoped it might be ceded some day to Cuba, the rights of American citizens, who largely own its land, should be protected.

"If the senate would get as excited over the ratification of this treaty," he asserted, "a great many people who now think that the senate is of little use would have their confidence restored."

HOLDER CONTINUES AT CAPITOL POST IN MURDER CASE DESPITE REMOVAL AT FORT VALLEY

Prepares To Wage Fight in Court—Dr. Charles M. Strahan Has Not Decided on Appointment.

Following receipt of letters and telegrams from prominent lawyers from many parts of Georgia to the effect that the governor has no right to remove a chairman of the state highway board summarily without a legal hearing of charges, Chairman John N. Holder, who was ousted Wednesday, declared Thursday that he will continue to occupy his post until ordered to vacate through "regular legal procedure."

Dr. Charles M. Strahan, professor of engineering at the University of Georgia, appointed by Governor Walker to succeed Chairman Holder, Thursday conferred with Governor Walker and Chairman Holder concerning the situation. He announced after the conferences that he has not accepted the appointment and would make no decision in the case until he gives it "several days' consideration."

Governor Clifford Walker stated that he had nothing more to say about the highway department situation. He said he had conferred with Dr. Strahan and Dr. Strahan had told him he would decide whether or not he would accept the appointment.

It was announced Thursday night by Clarence Calhoun, attorney for blood relatives in the fight launched by the youth in an effort to break the last will of the dead man. The case is expected to end today, court attaches predicted.

The trial of the suit brought by Frank Deans, 19, Michigan university junior, to force the appointment of a receiver to administer the estate and to break the will by establishment of the fact that he is the son and only heir to the large estate, was opened Thursday morning. GLOOMY PROSPECT SEEN BY LEADERS OF REPUBLICANS

Coolidge Disregards Advice of All Except Butler and Sends Warren's Name Back to Senate.

SENATE IS AMAZED AT SUDDEN ACTION

Biggest Fight Since League of Nations Battle Predicted—Heart of "Regulars" Not in It.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER. Washington, March 12.—After inspecting their lines, administration senate leaders are dolefully shaking their heads and fearing that the nomination of Charles B. Warren to be attorney general will be rejected a second time, even though the white house is making a show-down issue of it.

When he recovered from his amazement at the resubmission of the nomination, Majority Leader Curtis canvassed the republicans who voted against Warren. But all were immovable on first solicitation and at the end of the day, the leaders had no hope save on the slender chance that the white house, by using the patronage club, might finally force one wobbly senator to desert the opposition. There is no sign of this at the moment, but so juicy are the plums that may be dangled before a hungry senator that hope will not be lost until the roll call is taken.

Senators Are Amazed. The amazement of the senators when they received Warren's nomination Thursday was approached only by that of the white house when it was first rejected Tuesday. President Coolidge acted against the advice of every republican leader in the senate except Butler of Massachusetts. Half a dozen of them told the president Wednesday that Warren cannot be confirmed and that it would be futile to resubmit it. Nevertheless, the president held a breakfast conference with Warren, attended also by Senator William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, who was the president's campaign manager. At this conference, it was decided to make a final fight.

The nomination was sent to the senate at noon without comment. Later, the white house issued this one short, pointed statement: "Announced in One Sentence. "At the request of the president, Mr. Warren consented to allow his name to be again sent to the senate."

Thus the grandest fight since the league of nations days seems to be on and how Washington loves it! The spring languor has vanished. Senators are buzzing in the cloak rooms and lobbies, trading up maneuvers, trading merry quips, and grinning from ear to ear as they contemplate the prospect.

For, curiously, the heart of the administration senators is not in this fight. Their public utterances are restrained and within the proper limits.

Art of Knife Wins Victory In Operation

Washington Doctor To Recover From Angina Pectoris Operation.

Washington, March 12.—Medical science and faith have triumphed in the case of Dr. Charles H. Franzoni. Resting comfortably on his hospital bed, Franzoni has the quiet realization that with the passing of the day he has won his gamble for life when he submitted himself to a unique operation for Angina pectoris at a clinic of visiting doctors in convention here.

Franzoni, between the low voiced discussions of his experience, sleeps for short periods. He is fully aware of the desperate chance he took, keen to the realization that deviation of the scalpel hair's breadth as it sought its way among the vital organs of the throat would have meant death.

Physicians advised Franzoni tonight that he might plan on leaving the hospital about the middle of next week, cured of the disease which gave him such tortures and constantly threatened sudden death.

MASSACHUSETTS MAN FIRST TO GIVE BONUS TO LEGION

Indianapolis, March 12.—Fred C. Alexander, of Newtonville, Mass., was the first exserviceman in the United States to contribute his cash bonus from the government to the American Legion $5,000,000 endowment fund, his bonus check for $48 being received today by Robert Tyn-dall, legion treasurer.

"This is my federal bonus, which I don't care to use, since I did not go across and had my salary paid while in the army," said Alexander's letter accompanying the check.

American Prison Reforms Needed, Says Mrs. O'Hare

"The new spiritual urge of the labor movement," was the theme of an address delivered Thursday night at the Labor temple by Mrs. Kate O'Hare, of Mena, Ark., an instructor of psychology in the Commonwealth college. The lecture was under auspices of the United Garment Workers.

Mrs. O'Hare told of her 14 months' experience in federal prison, to which she was sentenced on charges of anti-war propaganda, picturing conditions in the prison and citing reforms that were badly needed. She called upon members of organized labor of Atlanta to aid in obtaining these changes.

At the conclusion of her address she was given an ovation. Many prominent Atlantans were included in the audience.

SWITCHMAN HELD FOR SETTING FIRE TO GIRL'S DRESS

New Orleans, La., March 12.—James V. Glynn, 38, a switchman, was arrested this afternoon, charged with the murder of Miss Mamie Herbert, who died Sunday from burns received March 8 night during a dance at Moose hall.

Glynn is charged with having set fire to the paper costume worn by Miss Herbert, inflicting wounds from which she died.

Identification of Glynn as the man who struck the match to the woman's costume was made by Miss Bessie Maud, a policewoman.

The accused man is alleged to have thrown liquid from a bottle on to the dress of the woman and then to have thrown a lighted match thereon. When the match struck the paper costume, it at once burst into flame, enveloping the young woman, who struggled to free herself.

Deputy Sheriff Alfred Kippers, who was present at the dance, was severely burned in an attempt to aid the young woman.

HOUGHTON DISCOUNTS REPORTS ON GERMANY

Washington, March 12.—Fears of Germany secretly arming itself were discounted today by Alanson B. Houghton, newly appointed American ambassador to Great Britain.

Houghton has not arms of any considerable extent, Mr. Houghton declared and neither has she any real surplus of war materials or productive reserves. The state police, he said, although stationed in barracks, are poorly equipped, and only about one in three is armed.

An optimistic picture of economic and political conditions in Germany was painted by the former envoy.

NORTHEAST WIND UNDER CLOUDY SKY IS WEATHER MENU

If you should venture out of doors today it behooves you to tie a string on the new spring hat or you may lose that decorative bit of scenery, according to C. F. von Herrmann, head of the local United States weather bureau station, who foretells brisk northeast winds under cloudy skies for today.

The expected rains of Thursday did not materialize, but today probable showers are promised with lowering skies throughout the day.

Thursday the thermometer again went close to the 70-degree mark, but today it is not scheduled to reach above approximately 58 degrees, with a possible minimum as low as 50 degrees.

Despite the scheduled drop in temperature, no frost is expected in Atlanta and vicinity this morning.

WEEKS ORDERS TESTS OF ANTI-AIR GUNNERY

Washington, March 12.—Dissatisfied with results of the anti-aircraft gunnery tests held at Fort Monmouth last week, war department general staff officers have been instructed by Secretary Weeks to plan a general scheme for development within the next year, which is expected to show conclusively whether ground guns are effective against aerial machines. To produce authentic data on the relative value of anti-aircraft guns and aircraft the subject will be explored as thoroughly as funds now available for such purposes will permit.

Secretary Weeks, who left Washington today on a vacation, conferred with Major General Hines, chief of staff, and several chiefs of staff branches, regarding the aircraft situation and received the oral reports on the Fort Monmouth tests. From these, it was said, he has concluded that the tests were not conclusive. The guns and ammunition used, it was said, were old in type and manufacture, and the lack of personnel as well as training facilities had to be considered as factors.

GLOOMY PROSPECT SEEN BY REPUBLICANS

But at heart, they—even the most loyal republicans—feel that the president should have accepted their advice and dropped Warren when the senate rejected him. Now that he has chosen to go counter to that advice, they will do what they can to help him, but they want it understood they assume no responsibility for the results. They feel that the president has called upon them to deliver the impossible, so that they go into this with a somewhat different frame of mind. They regard this as the president's fight, not theirs.

Watson Is Gloomy.

"I told the president yesterday I didn't think the nomination could be confirmed in this senate, and I haven't seen anything since then that would make me change my mind," said Senator Watson of Indiana, assistant republican leader.

Senator Curtis, majority leader, told the president he could see no chance of getting any more votes. Other senators on the republican side said the same thing. For a time there was some hope that Norbeck and McMaster of South Dakota would vote against Warren, but at the end of the day, neither showed any sign of weakening.

As to the routine, the renomination goes through the parliamentary mill just as if he had never been seen before. It was referred to the judiciary committee Thursday. Chairman Cummings called a meeting of the committee for Friday morning. Warren will be given a chance to defend himself before the committee if he desires.

Warren Not to Appear.

But he has expressed no such desire to members of the committee, and unless he does, he will not be heard. Both republican and democratic members said they had no desire to bottle the nomination up in committee. If Warren does not ask to be heard, they will report it out Friday or early next week at the latest. This report will be adverse, according to unofficial polls made Thursday. The committee stands 9 to 7 against Warren, with Borah and Norris standing with the solid democratic membership.

Then the nomination will be taken up by the senate. Many parliamentary maneuvers are expected. For one thing, Walsh, of Montana, will raise a point of order that the president cannot constitutionally re-submit a nomination which has been rejected. Few senators agree with Walsh in this and he probably will have difficulty in sustaining it. Walsh himself is understood to be a little doubtful, but wants to force a definite decision on this point.

Little Debate Expected.

Most republican leaders expect little debate, as all are desirous of winding up the special session as early as possible. Cummings, differing with the others, looks for long discussion.

Analyzing the probabilities, republican leaders cannot see where they will get any additional votes. Overman, the only democrat they had on the first roll call, said Thursday he would stay with the democrats now. All of the ten republicans and insurgents opposed to Warren refuse to budge. So the only source of votes for the administration is in the senators who were absent and unpaired.

There were six of these: Howell, La Follette, and the following democrats, Dill, Smith, Stephens and Underwood. Four are anti-Warren. Howell and Underwood are doubtful, but inclined against Warren also. Therefore the administration can get nothing from the absentees.

Gooding, Has Gone Home.

Furthermore, Gooding, of Ohio, who voted for Warren, has left town and is on his way to Idaho. He cannot be recalled in time to vote. The other absentees were paired—this is for each Warren vote absent, an anti-Warren vote was withheld by private agreement, in accordance with the usual pairing custom. Thus, the four anti-Warren votes were paired with the four Warren votes. Greene, Lenroot, Phipps and Edge could be produced, that would release one more anti-Warren vote from among the paired democrats who refrained from voting Tuesday.

The one hope of the administration is that one senator can be found who will switch his vote. That would force a tie. Vice President Dawes will be on hand for any such contingency this time.

Reason for Renomination.

Various reasons are advanced among senators as to why the president renominated Warren in face of all advice to the contrary. One is that he wanted to reopen the discussion, so that a more adequate defense of Warren might be included in the record, which now consists largely of attacks on him for his connection with the sugar trust 20 years ago. But unless Warren appears before the judiciary committee and defends himself, he probably will have little said in his favor on the floor. One senate leader said that if he were Warren, he would certainly want to appear before the committee and answer the charges against him.

The other major reason suggested is that the president's fighting blood is up and that—like Woodrow Wilson—he won't admit defeat. Butler was the only senator who advised Coolidge to get his back up and fight the senate. Often such strategy evokes a popular response in the country.

But some administration senators said privately that the past sugar trust connections of Warren would handicap him in any such appeal to the country, despite the tradition that the president must be allowed to choose his own cabinet without interference. One senator who said this explained that he was an old personal friend and knew that if Warren ever became attorney general he would lean backwards in prosecuting the trusts just to prove he was honest, but that this fact would have little weight now.

Oratory Contest Is Called Test of What High School Is Doing To Train Pupils

Expert Asserts Measure of Scholarship Will Be Demonstrated by Entrants in Race.

The oratorical contest now under way in Georgia under the auspices of The Constitution and in connection with the national oratorical contest sponsored by the American Bar Association offers to high schools of the state opportunities of showing the broad scope of their work, according to a statement issued Thursday by Dr. J. S. Stewart, of the University of Georgia, president of the state high school association.

Preliminary contests are to be held this month in the high schools of Georgia, later district contests will be held and finally a state contest in Atlanta and April. Winners of the state contest will meet in Nashville for the zone championship and seven zone winners will meet in Washington in May to decide the national contest. This plan gives every pupil who enters a chance at the grand prize of $2,000 offered by the American Bar association. The state prize of $100, a second prize of $50 and ten prizes of $15 each are offered by The Constitution to district winners.

In pointing out the opportunity of the schools in this contest, Dr. Stewart said: "Perhaps the best statement of the goal of education is that made by the commission on reorganization of secondary education, when it said, 'Education in a democracy should develop in each individual the knowledge, interests, ideals, habits, and power by which he may find his place and use that place to shape both himself and society to ever nobler ends.' Now the high school association endeavors to supplement the regular class room work by developing knowledge, worthy interests, high ideals, correct habits and power through debates, essays, writing, declamation, music and athletics.

All these contests grow out of the school and must not be considered extraneous to it. The more nearly every student is interested in some of these contests each year, the more completely the school is finding expression for its members.

Contest Is Factor.
"The Constitution contest will stimulate effort and awaken new interests in the pupils and keener appreciation on the part of the public in its great work."

"There will be over 8,000 graduates from the high schools in Georgia this year. The oratorical contest is in a sense a test of the work of the schools. Have the pupils learned to investigate a subject, to think upon it, to express their thoughts in convincing, pleasing English? Has interest in public questions been developed? Do they show ability to present before the public their thoughts with correct habits of voice and posture? Or are they dead to these public questions and contests that appeal to the intellectual mind, and find interest only physical contests?"

DR. W. J. McNAUGHTON CLAIMED BY DEATH

In a gray ward at Grady hospital Thursday morning the grim doors of death quietly closed upon the career of Dr. W. J. McNaughton, an unique character in Georgia history. The end came after a month of acute illness from high blood pressure and heart disease and the hand of death brought peace to the man who had felt the chill of the gallows, had experienced the relief of commutation, from the death sentence and had ultimately been freed from the toils of penal servitude by

Was 42 Years Old.
Roy Scott Anderson was 42 years old, with the exception of the time spent in America in completing his education, lived his entire life in China. He was a student at Emory college for two years, being a member of the class of 1903 and of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

On leaving Emory, he returned to China and taught in Soochow university, but on account of his intimate knowledge of Chinese affairs, was soon called on to take part in commercial affairs and to assist the government.

For several years he represented American oil companies in their negotiations with the court of Peking and as political counsel for various American interests was instrumental in putting over some of the biggest deals ever known in China.

He was assistant chief of transportation for the Republican army in 1911, holding the rank of brigadier general, and was counselor to the president of the republic of China in 1912. At various times he acted as counselor to the ministry of commerce of the republic of China, vice chairman of the national industrial commission, and counselor to the governors general of several provinces.

Knew China Well.
It was said of Mr. Anderson that he knew more about China than any native. He had visited many secluded parts of China, spoken many dialects, and had an unpassed knowledge of the resources of the country.

The case in which he was held in China was shown by the fact that he was given many official decorations, some of which had never before been given to a foreigner. He is credited with having played a great part in influencing China to cast her lot with the Allies against Germany in the world war.

Evening Post, Samuel G. Blythe, noted political writer, named Mr. Anderson as one of three men responsible for the result.

On account of the confidence which Chinese of all classes had in him, he was able to arrange for the release of the man who had been in 1923 to be released when the efforts of the highest Chinese officials and

Was Hero in Crisis.
In 1918 when the dread influenza threatened to make a shambles of the prison farm, Dr. McNaughton, with his great knowledge of medicine, threw himself into the fight against the grim disease with an aboriginal which saved the lives of many members of the penal colony and afterward brought his pardon at the hands of former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick.

During the many months consumed by Dr. McNaughton and his attorneys in their fight for his life, the accused man maintained his innocence and finally was convicted largely on circumstantial evidence. This fact caused his reprieve from the death sentence and the commutation of his sentence to a life term on the prison farm where he was confined at the time of his heroic fight against disease which led to his pardon.

Following his pardon in 1918, Dr. McNaughton drifted from public gaze and came to Atlanta where he engaged in the manufacture of proprietary medicines.

In Business Here.
After several years in business in this city the rigors of prison life and his unselfish service to his fellowmen in the realm of medicine took toll of his health and he was forced to go into a sanitarium. Later he was removed to Grady hospital, where public interest again became focused on his battle for life.

Thursday morning at just a little after 9:30 o'clock death—which had once before touched his hand with the dread threat of the gallows and many times since had held communion with him in the service of his diseased fellowmen—led Dr. McNaughton away to his final resting place.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the chapel of J. Austin Pittman company, Rev. T. R. Kendall will officiate. Interment in Greenwood cemetery.

Dr. McNaughton was convicted of the murder of Fred Flanders, well-to-do farmer of Emanuel county, nearly 15 years ago. The trial was one of the most sensational in criminal annals in Georgia.

Evidence brought out at the time tended to show that Flanders was poisoned.

JUDGE J. T. LAMBRIGHT DIES IN BRUNSWICK

Judge J. T. Lambright, 88, died Thursday afternoon at his home in Brunswick, according to news received by relatives in Atlanta. Funeral services have not been completed.

He is survived by two sons, Tom and Monroe Lambright; a daughter, Mrs. Bessie McVeigh, all of Brunswick; two granddaughters, Mrs. Page Helm Jones, of Atlanta, a daughter-in-law of Dr. M. Ashby Jones, and Mrs. Rosella Hobbs, of Jacksonville, Fla.; two grandsons, W. E. and Dr. J. P. Lambright, of Atlanta, and a sister, Mrs. A. C. Ward, of Atlanta.

Judge Lambright was the father of the late Dr. W. E. Lambright, of Atlanta, a prominent dentist who was active, following his retirement from the dental profession, in real estate investments.

PAULINA LONGWORTH SEES WHITE HOUSE

Washington, March 12.—Paulina, month-old daughter of Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, got a glimpse today of the white house, where her parents were married, and the home at the time of her grandfather, Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Longworth called at the state department just across the street for her brother, Kenneth, who is going to Asia to hunt big game. In the rear of the automobile was a market basket which Mrs. Longworth said cost 65 cents and in the basket was little Paulina.

Roy Scott Anderson, Leader EMORY MAN RESCUED AMERICANS FROM BANDITS In Chinese Affairs, Is Dead

By LAUREN FOREMAN.
Roy Scott Anderson, born in China of Georgia parents, alumnus of Emory university, whose remarkable and brilliant career as a power in Chinese affairs was brought to the attention of the world by his success in negotiating for the release of the American and European captives, held by Chinese bandits under Tsin-Mei-Yao, during the summer of 1923, died in Pekin of pneumonia early Thursday morning, according to cable advices received by Atlanta friends.

Mr. Anderson was the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. David L. Anderson, who went to China as missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, over 30 years ago. As a young man the father, Dr. David L. Anderson, was connected with the business department of The Constitution before deciding to enter the mission field.

foreign diplomats had failed. He went directly to the stronghold of the bandits and held parley with them and reported to the American minister the terms on which the release was effected.

Visited America.
Mr. Anderson made frequent trips to America and nearly always visited Atlanta when in this country. He claimed this city as his home and when he arranged for the release of the bandits' captives, the circle of friends which was printed all over the world stated that the successful negotiations had been made by "Roy S. Anderson of Atlanta, Ga."

Mr. Anderson's visits to Atlanta were always occasions of interest to a number of friends, also to a large circle of friends who had been his intimates at Emory. Among them were his cousins, William D. Albert D. Dr. John D. and Logan D. Thompson, M. Timmons, Hal F. Hentz, Dr. Montague L. Boyd, the late LeRoy Duncan, and the late Louis J. Leonard.

Mr. Anderson is survived by his widow who was Miss Julia Rordan, a native of Virginia, who was with him at the time of his death; a son, David L., who is in school in London, and a daughter, Julia, who is in school in Paris.

RELATIVES OF NEGRO MURDERESS CONVICTED
Three relatives of Pearl Booth, negro, convicted slayer of J. T. Arendell, hotel nightwatchman at the plant of the Patterson Lumber company, were convicted in Fulton superior court Thursday on charges of burglary and sentenced to from 5 to 10 years at the prison farm. The convicted negroes are Jessie Dillard, Annie Lee Mathis and Janie Williams.

According to the charges of police, the negroes, under the direction of Pearl Booth, conducted a systematic robbery of 52 Atlanta dwellings from which property valued at $10,000 was taken. Most of this stolen property was found at the home of Pearl Booth at the time of her arrest.

Pile Sufferers
Can You Answer These Questions?
Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief? Why cutting and operations fail? Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?
Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonard and known as HEM-ROID, now sold by Jacobs' Drug Stores and druggists generally, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the internal cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. The simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. There is no reason why it should not do the same for you.—(adv.)

New Municipal Building Plans Come Up Today

Plans for a new municipal building for Atlanta, which would house all city departments, will be considered this afternoon at a meeting of the public improvements committee.

According to present plans, the new building is to be constructed from funds raised by sale of the present city hall, police barracks, and two fire engine houses. Reports received Thursday by the city tax assessors show the property to be worth a total of $1,550,830, and if that amount can be obtained, it is expected to be sufficient to carry out tentative plans for a magnificent structure.

While several sites are being considered, one which has met with general approval is that in the rear of the court house. It was proposed by Councilman C. G. Allen, whose plan would call for a building to cover the entire block, with the exception of the court house.

The public improvements committee, also is considering the proposal of Councilman Harry York, to request Senator Walter F. George to ask that a new federal building be erected here, and the present post-office building sold to the city for use as a municipal building.

HIGH COURT AFFIRMS SWINT'S LIFE TERM

A life term, imposed in the superior court of Floyd county on Will Swint, Thursday was affirmed in a decision handed down by the state supreme court. Swint was convicted on a charge of dynamiting the home of John W. Robo, who was connected with the police and sheriff's office in Rome for many years.

The appeal was based on the charge that a confession, on which Swint was largely convicted, was forced from him. Swint confessed that he and three other men placed two sticks of dynamite under the porch of the Robo home, which was blown up shortly after midnight. It developed, during the trial, that Robo had arrested Swint on a liquor charge.

Over-Population Predicted 85,000,000 IN U. S. CALLED SUBNORMAL Without Control of Births

Hartford, Conn., March 12.—The Connecticut legislature is engaged in a not fight over a "birth control bill," in which Mrs. Margaret Sanger, famous birth advocate of birth control, Thursday held the center of the stage.

"Unless the United States scientifically controls its birth rate, it can eventually expect the same pressure of population and the same wretched living conditions that now exist in India and China," Mrs. Sanger told the solons.

The bill would authorize physicians to prescribe methods of contraception to their patients. The judiciary committee, at its hearing Thursday was confronted by a room packed with advocates and opponents of the measure.

"The greatest question before the world today," Mrs. Sanger said, "the pressure of population on the means of sustenance."

"It is extremely unwise for diseased persons, as persons diseased, to have any children at all. There already are 85,000,000 subnormal people in the United States."

"Man has conquered many of nature's other mysteries, such as fire and the water, but he has failed miserably in conquering the sex instinct because it always has been taboo—clothed in mystery and in decency. We should bring it into the sunlight."

Mrs. Hill Gives Outline Of Course in Interior Art

During the course in interior art to be given by Mrs. Alice Hill, beginning March 30 at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, the following subjects will be studied: Materials used in decorating, the use of materials, decorative schemes requiring rugs, rugs and their arrangement, decorative painting, and decoration of period interiors.

The course will deal with interior art and interior decorating. Interior decorating is ordinarily imitative of certain decorations of past periods or imitative of present English interiors not well adapted to American homes. Moreover, any such decorative schemes require furnished to fit the scheme. Mrs. Hill's course is a teaching and adaptation of principles of color and line so that they can be adapted to any room, any kind of furniture, any kind of personality, any kind of home, house or building. Many of these principles were worked out personally by Brown Landone while he was director general of the International Institute of Science of Arts in Paris, and are known only to him and his students.

Studied Under Landone.
Mrs. Hill has devoted many months to the study, under the direction of Brown Landone, to a single principle of decorating and will give to those taking this course the benefit of her studies. Some of these principles were highly commended by the great sculptor Rodin when they were discussed with him.

It is also arranged to meet for the methods and materials used are such that almost any person can decorate a room beautifully for a sum not greater than he would pay to the ordinary paper-hanger to paper a wall and calamine a ceiling for ten consecutive days. Sunday excepted. The classes will be held at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, and the exact hours, registration dates, etc., will be announced later.

Tenn., who spoke on "Porcelain jacket crown and its practical use as anchorage for removable bridge work," and Dr. James P. Ruy, of New York city, speaking on "Full and Partial Dentures." Dr. Hoffer's lecture was illustrated.

Dr. George D. Winter, of St. Louis, Mo., was principal speaker at the Thursday night meeting. Dr. Winter outlined the technical points in "Impacted Mandibular Third Molars."

DENTAL CLINIC PLANS
GENERAL DISCUSSION
General discussion of problems confronting the dental profession and possible remedies will fill the program for the second day of the Atlanta mid-winter clinic, which is being held for its 14th consecutive year under auspices of the Fifth District Dental society. The delegates will be called to order at 9 o'clock this morning.

The initial session of the three-day meet was opened Thursday in the Henry Grady hotel with addresses by several of the country's foremost authorities in the dental profession.

The morning was featured by addresses by Dr. Thomas Hartzell, of Minneapolis, Minn., on "A Review of the Known Facts Concerning Cause, Pathology, Prevention and Cure of Pyorrhea," and Dr. Emory O. Thompson, of Warren, Pa., on "Wax Manipulation, Investing and Casting." The session was opened with an address by W. A. PRAYER:—We are glad, Lord, that thou dost keep us unto thyself as the apple of thine eye.

DEMOTIONS DESERVED.

Washington dispatches state emphatically that President Coolidge heartily approves the action of senate republicans in replacing the La Follette bolters with party "regulars" on important committees.

That was a foregone conclusion when the action was taken. Certainly so important a movement involving party unity without the full consent of the head of the party.

There can be no question, viewed from the standpoint of party cohesiveness, as to the wisdom of the action. La Follette, to illustrate, not only deliberately left the republican party but sought by every method known to the crafty politician to encompass its destruction for selfish reasons.

Fidelity is the first principle of an organization's integrity, and no party can be faithful to itself, and honest with itself, that permits such disloyalty on the part of any of its members. To have embraced La Follette, after his action, into the party fold, would not only have invited further and more drastic insubordination, but would have lost for the party the respect of the public. The reference to La Follette here is to specify the leader for the sake of argument. The same logic applies to all of the bolters who followed La Follette.

While the democratic party is not on trial in the premises, being the minority in the senate, and therefore in control of no committees, at the same time the same action with regard to Senator Wheeler that the republicans took with regard to La Follette and his group Senator Wheeler as a democrat appeared at and participated in the New York convention, and yet he deliberately not only sought the defeat of the nominees of that convention, but sought the destruction of the democratic party, and the setting up of a radical party of political nondescripts in its place. He has no more place in the democratic caucus than has La Follette in the republican caucus. Indeed, measured by the same party yardstick, as running mates on a national party ticket must be measured, La Follette has the same right in a democratic caucus as has his running mate.

If the democratic party will show more teeth in a fight, more cohesiveness in organization, and less vacillation in policy, it will succeed better, and more deserve to succeed. The public has little regard for a weak-kneed individual, or a weak-kneed group or organization.

DEATH OF ROY ANDERSON.

The news from Peking, China, that Roy Anderson is dead in that far-away capital of the Orient will carry deep sorrow to a host of Georgia friends. He was the son of the late Rev. Dr. David L. Anderson, of Atlanta, who went to China as a Methodist missionary in the '70s, and the deceased was born in that country. He returned with his parents and spent many years of his life in Atlanta, and was educated at Emory. The outstanding political figures in all of Asia, and by all odds the most powerful figure among the foreigners not directly associated with the dynasties. During the years of political upheaval when the Peking government was assailed by rival provincial governments, Mr. Anderson was turned to as a mediator, and not only served as a diplomatic counselor in the delicate position of the United States in the premises, but was a potential force in restoring peace for the government at Peking at the time. This government turned to him in many of its threatened Oriental entanglements, not alone because of his great ability, but his thorough understanding of the civil differences in China, and the many-angled international differences between the sundry governments of the Far East. His integrity, and open, frank, honorable methods of mediation, were recognized throughout the world.

His dynamic force in securing the speedy release of American tourists held by Chinese bandits only a comparatively short time ago illustrated his resourcefulness as an American at the Chinese court.

He died young—in the morning side of 50. And in his death a life of great usefulness closed.

THE TIME FOR ACTION.

On this page is an intensely interesting discussion of northeast Georgia opportunities by Roland Turner, general agricultural agent of the Southern Railway system. It is timely because there is time sufficient for some concerted movement, before the planting season, looking to an adaptation of Mr. Turner's suggestions. That he offers the good offices of the agricultural department of a great railroad in furthering organization and action is encouraging to those who are anticipating a reconstruction of the agricultural and live stock program for the section. Mr. Turner stresses the possibilities of orcharding in the hills, and particularly the possibilities of stock growing.

In an address before the board of directors of the Southeastern Fair association in Atlanta the other day Dr. Soule urged the great possibilities of alfalfa growing in northeast Georgia. This is undeniable. The agricultural college has made surveys that demonstrate that north Georgia is unsurpassed by any agricultural section in America for the growing of this exceptional hay and pasture product to a profit.

Georgia, one of the oldest of the best undeveloped states, and today, with the great rush of people to Florida, passing through Georgia by the thousands from November to May, the people of this state are challenged to take advantage of their opportunities. There is not a section, not a single county, that does not offer its specific advantages. The development of a state's potential ceramic resources is inviting. Live stock growing is inviting. General farming is inviting. Industrial development is inviting. Then why not?

It is hoped the people of the Habersham-Rabun zone, incorporating all the adjoining and nearby counties with the same general advantages, may profit by Mr. Turner's suggestions. The Southern Railway system and the Georgia Railway and Power company can and will be of incalculable benefit in a movement for organized development if they will put the machinery in motion.

WORTHY OF SUPPORT.

The finance committee of city council has recommended an appropriation of $5,000 for an Atlanta exhibit in the Georgia exhibit at the Southern exposition in Grand Central Palace in New York in May. It has also recommended that this appropriation be turned over to the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce with a commission to prepare and take care of such an exhibit.

Both of these recommendations are commendable, and we especially commend the very graceful act of thus encouraging the Atlanta Junior Chamber in its unselfish undertaking to save the state of Georgia from the threatened deplorable situation of having the one vacant space from the south. And particularly in an exposition that will be seriously viewed and studied by hundreds of thousands of people, and at this moment when the home-seeker movement from the north is turning from the west to the south.

The Junior Chamber will save the day. There is no question about that. With its usual militancy it is on the job, and is meeting with hearty cooperation from every section of Georgia.

All of the larger cities of the south are preparing exhibits. Of course Atlanta could not be missing on such an occasion. Mayor Sims saw the situation at a glance and heartily approved of a $5,000 appropriation. He also made the recommendation to the finance committee in his patriotic fit.

"Georgia will be there!" That is the Junior Chamber's slogan in the present campaign to raise $20,000 for a creditable state-wide exhibit. Of course, Georgia will be there. Atlanta will be there. Every Atlanta citizen, every Georgian, should give enthusiastic encouragement to this young, dynamic organization in its undertaking.

The Tax Song.
I.
It's tax for to sow
And tax for to reap,
Tax for to give
And tax for to keep;
Man born to trouble,
And trouble in a heap
Till you land on the other side of Jordan.

II.
It's tax for to stay
And tax for to go,
Tax for the ticket
To the short life show;
For what you're known for,
Till you land on the other side of Jordan.

Oh, Mister Tax Man,
Grim and grim,
Don't take all the honey
Where the glad bees hum,
Try to remember
That we all want some.

Briefs From Billville.
Saw man the other day who had a half-don't look weevil in a bottle. From a casual glance at the way they were cutting up, we are convinced that we must have swallowed about a pint of 'em during our last moonshine expedition.

Our thanks to the friends who remembered us on our recent birthday anniversary. We hope to have another in about six weeks from now. Two more this year will just about put us on our financial feet.

A platform lecturer says if you'll find money in your pocket while you're talking, you won't be confused. But Lord knows, if we could do that we wouldn't have a word to say.

At last we have arrived at corn-planting time. With a fairly good season, a bushel of seed should make acres of gallons.

O good people,
When trouble comes along
Hear the bannin'—
The hallooing song;

And meet on the other side of Jordan.

The Squirrel's Example.
Ho-e's a practical sermon, on the side by Editor Townsend, of the Dahlonega Nugget:

"Some complain that they cannot make a living now. What are they going to do when old age comes? The great trouble is a lot of people spend and waste too much time during the spring, summer and fall. The ground squirrel uses better judgment than this. It saves up its nuts and its food during the summer and fall and for this reason never goes hungry in its comfortable home which it also builds and furnishes before the winter comes."

This, entitled "Things Remembered," is by Katherine Edelman, in the Kansas City Star:
"A form within a doorway bright,
When day was changing into night;
The handclasp of a friend, true,
A look from baby eyes of blue.
A day of June, radiant, fair,
An hour of crushing, black despair,
A book that filled a passing hour,
The touch of tender mother hands.
An answer in a faltering way,
An altar banked with flowers gay,
A baby's cry upon the night,
The first sad waiting, tears and sighs;
The touch of tender mother hands,
An hour upon the shining sands.
These little things will be with me
Through time and all eternity."

FULFILLMENT.
I do not like to work solely toward destinations. For so often destinations lose their identity in illusions, while the illusions are not worth while. I want to live my life as it is, and make it better by the work of my hands and my mind.

It is because of the seriousness of identity that I look upon all fulfillment as I would look upon the morning. I will be glad if it comes so that I may find the more of its hope, its inspiration, its joy, its peace, its warmth, its life; but I shall not complain, I shall just accept it as it comes, for my life shall find its fulfillment in today.

None of us ever receives from life what is expected. What a dullness would come over incentive if this were true.

On the other hand, how we may be thrilled by hope of fulfillment! The poor man is peaceful in his heart because he isn't bothered with the collection of rents and the paying of taxes, he isn't worried about what he will do tomorrow when he has no money, he isn't worried about what he will do tomorrow when he has no money, he isn't worried about what he will do tomorrow when he has no money.

There are few completed friendships. It is fine that this, also, is true. There is always the hope of its fulfillment.

But I would that we might never forget that fulfillment is a part of all work, all love, all beauty—all life.

A Call for New Senate Rules

BY ARTHUR CAPPER, Senator From Kansas

Washington engrosses senate genius for debate for two hours, and but a scant half hour is given to consideration and passage of two of the largest annual appropriation bills, involving the spending of millions.

The public observes these absurdities. It sees in the jam behind the talk that trickles over the rules dam such proposals as the world court of justice, the proposal to reorganize departments of government in the interest of economy, agricultural and transportation legislation, Muscle Shoals and the like.

At once it is flashed over the country that there's a "filibuster" on. But such "jams" are not invariably the result of a concerted "filibuster" plot. The failure of the recent session to enact any legislation other than supply bills, was not the result of an organized, dilatory filibuster. It was the result of an involuntary filibuster forced by the existing rules.

The legislative machine is a high-powered affair. Well organized, industrious. Of proper motives and a patriotic desire to be the welfare of the country. But its weird contrivances are such that the greater stress, the more power is applied, the tighter clamp the brakes.

Undoubtedly it needs to be forced into the shop and overhauled, and equipped with "forward speed" attachments.

Does Not Think Mrs. Hughes Should Hang

Editor Constitution: I am in favor of capital punishment. It is the bulwark of civil liberty, and the countries that have abolished it have gone into moral decay.

I have written numerous articles on this subject.

But Mrs. Hughes must not hang, and I call on the prison commission and Governor Walker to stop the proceedings at least until something is done with the men who committed an atrocious crime on an old lady in Jones county last year, and the two young men butchers who killed a man and robbed him at or near Butler, Ga. This man and his wife and eight children, and by a mere technicality of the law parties live. As to the Jones county boys, very few know what became of them.

The last two, because a small crevice in the gallows structure could be seen by a magnifying glass, escaped a first verdict of death.

There has never been but two white women hanged in Georgia. The last one, Mrs. Surratt, hung under Cordele, I think, was hung under Governor Smith's administration, in 1872.

Mrs. Hughes must not and will not hang. T. E. MASSENGALE, Norwood, Ga., March 12, 1925.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

CRITICISM OF A CRITICISM.
In an article entitled "Cold Logic" printed here recently I quoted the following from a folder distributed by a corporation which engages in the practice of hygiene through extensive advertising.

"There is little doubt but that certain manifestations of the common cold, such as sneezing, coughing, and running at the nose are purely physical reactions due to chilling of the body. Whether or not such a cold is passed on to another person, it is not a disease, and it is not a condition of the individual, and probably largely on the type of bacteria that are already present in the nasal cavities and throat."

I ridiculed this theory by emphasizing the fact that the reaction to colds are merely physical, not spiritual or mental as one might otherwise have supposed, and by japing Houdini to investigate the matter by which the "purely physical reaction" changes over to an infectious disease—or if Houdini isn't available, then asking Mrs. Gamp of Glenview to do so.

So far, a teacher of pathology in a medical college tells me, my criticism was fine. But he is afraid I am going too far with my explanation. And I am afraid the teacher is right, now that he points out the flaw in my argument. Anyhow, I will better try to explain my explanation.

My article concluded with this remark: "To be sure, bacteria are always present in the healthy person's nasal passages and the throat, sometimes virulent disease germs, virulent to other people, but we have no ground for the assumption that such germs are virulent to the individual who carries them; and the counter-argument to more reason to assume that such germs tend to immunize the carrier."

My pathologist critic avers that germs of people are not virulent to the individual who carries them, but we have no ground for the assumption that such germs are virulent to the individual who carries them; and the counter-argument to more reason to assume that such germs tend to immunize the carrier."

Which is all too true, darn it. And it makes it worse. It is I dare not try to blame it on the poor readers, the editors or the printers this time. I did it by my own fault. You put on the ground there was our dog and another dog. Here comes my explanation of the bull:

Take as a type of bacteria often present in the nasal passages or throat of healthy persons, the pneumococcus. Although cultures from the nose or throat of any large group of people show the pneumococcus present in the majority, it is a non-virulent strain in four out of five cases. We know that virulent bacteria diminish in virulence or lose their virulence by passage through successive animals or persons. Perhaps these non-virulent strains of pneumococcus have lost their virulence that way and in process of losing it have conferred some degree of immunity upon the persons harboring them. The pneumococcus is the germ that causes pneumonia and many cases of those common respiratory infections which some folks call "colds" but which are really pneumonia in its early stages. The germ that causes pneumonia is built with the initial letters of common respiratory infections, and conveying a true meaning, unlike the term "colds."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Lists of Foods.
Requests for diet lists or diets for this and that ailment come in constantly and are as constantly unanswered for the simple reason that I know of no diet list or diet which is advisable for any particular ailment indiscriminately.

Another constantly recurring question is something like this: "Please give a list of 10 foods which contain protein." I contain fat, and 10 which contain carbohydrate, and I want to regulate my diet. . . . As I can see no advantage in health in any such monkeying with the diet, I furnish no such lists.

All of these half-baked notions about diet are indicative of the form of Billings' complaint. The people who think they can adapt a diet to a given complaint all on their own, and taken the diet out of a certain type of magazine too seriously.

A lot of plain people who understand how foolish I do not prescribe for individuals cases of this kind, nevertheless seem to fancy that I can prescribe for an individual case anything except medicines. I am just as competent and willing and ready to prescribe medicines as I am to prescribe diet, exercises or any other kind of treatment or remedy here. It is quite as ethical and proper in every way, and legal, and moral, and sensible, for a physician to prescribe medicines as it is for him to prescribe massage, baths or any other remedial measure.

There, now, will the next reader who wants me to prescribe a diet for him step forward, please?

The Old Greaser.
Is monomania a definite disease, a form of insanity, or just a peculiarity of old senile persons?

Answer:—It means insanity on a single subject, for example, my notions about the rest of the world's affairs. I have seen a few old greasers, but I have never seen one who was not a little bit of a greaser.

Planting the trees a good distance.
In general there are three: the masters, who were the descendants of the conquerors capable of bearing arms; the subjugated natives, who were allowed to retain possession of their lands, but were forced to pay tribute rents and in times of war to fight for the glory and interest of their masters; and the slaves, who were the property of the state.

How many walnut trees can be planted in an acre of ground and what is the average yield of these trees?

Planting the trees a good distance apart, only about 12 trees are usually planted to the acre. An average walnut tree bears from 20 to 40 pounds of walnuts a year until the tree is about 15 years old and then it bears from 40 to 50 pounds per year.

From what does the name Arizona come?
Two meanings have been given for this word. The first is that it means arid or desert, but it is also claimed that the name is Aztec, from "Arizona," which means a rich land.

How long can a butterfly live?
This depends entirely on the genus and circumstances. Some live only a short time, while others live several months. The length of life varies from two weeks to six months, but the average is two months.

Who was the $240 bonus given to employees of the government and how many persons are now receiving it?

DR. MORRIS SWORN AS ACTING CHIEF

Berlin, March 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. Walter Sigmund took the oath today as acting president of the German republic to succeed the late Friedrich Ebert. Like Herr Ebert, Dr. Sigmund did not take the "so help me God," which is left optional in the oath as prescribed by the constitution.

The ceremony took place in the reichstag and the oath was administered after a brief welcoming address by the reichstag president, Herr Loeb.

Southern's Agricultural Agent Urges Fixed Farm Program for North Georgia

Editor Constitution: The other day I rode to Atlanta on the train with Mr. Roland Turner of the Southern. We talked of conditions in this section and he said some things that I asked him to put in a letter. I am sending you a copy of it. I hope that after you read it you may find some way to use it—as I know you are the greatest enthusiast on this country in the south.

I think they are going to accept Mr. Turner's offer of assistance in this country, and I am seriously considering trying to talk them into organizing a northeast Georgia development association, taking in Rabun and nearby counties for the general development of the section.

S. C. METCALFE, Mountain City, Ga., March 10, '25.

Mr. Turner's Suggestions.
The letter of Mr. Turner follows: "The northeast Georgia soils are for the most part typical Piedmont clay lands. The soil is a very fine quality of clay, and is generally underlain with a red clay subsoil. It is a soil of sufficient principal and important mineral plant foods. Probably in all the country to section which you have in mind, the soil is a well-balanced soil, and the growing season is around 200 days. The climate is from 100 to 200 days between frost dates, and of growing weather. Grain crops of all sorts are produced, but no part of the corn belt are larger crops of better quality corn being grown than in this section. Wheat and barley do exceedingly well, and while fall-sown crops are not so common, spring oats may be produced to perfection. Timothy and clover do splendidly and are of great importance. Hay crops are good. Soy beans and cowpeas do well, and the quality of this hay is recognized as the best in the south. The soil is a well-balanced soil, and the growing season is around 200 days. CRACKERS SEE CHAMPION SENATORS BLANK REDS

Brock, Cashions, Catchers, Arrive at Niehoff's Camp; Light Training Work Done

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN,
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Winter Park, Fla., March 12.—(Special)—Returning from Orlando where the Crackers and camp followers were guests of honor at the Cincinnati-Washington exhibition game this afternoon, the Atlanta party was greeted by Johnny Brock and E. P. Cashions, the two boys who are slated to receive the curves and fast ones of the half-dozen pitchers Bert Niehoff is to select from the army of hurlers now in camp. The ball game, by the way, resulted in a shutout victory for the Senators, 5 to 0.

Brock, who caught 100 games for Atlanta last year and was with the club year before last, motored from St. Louis to Atlanta where he boarded a south-bound Pullman in order to get here earlier than his gasoline-buggy would bring him. Catchers are badly needed in the training camp, and Bucky Hammond has been working overtime.

Cashions, the other catcher who was sitting up at the hotel waiting for his possible teammates, comes highly recommended from the Asheville club in the Sally league, and is counted on as a big gun behind the plate this year.

This skipper has boys out at Winter Park athletic field at 10 o'clock this morning for their daily dozen, which consisted of the regulation pepper game, batting practice, fielding practice, etc. At lunch time, however, he declared a half holiday in order to allow the players to accept the invitations of the hands of the world champions Senators.

3,000 See Game.
Something over 3,000 customers filled the stands to capacity. The band was on hand and Joe Tinker, Jr., dropped a ball from an airplane to start the game. Ivy Wingo, of Norcross, Ga., brother of Red Wingo, former Cracker, was stationed on the field to catch it. But little Joe evidently had no experience dropping bombs during the war, and did not figure on the proper angle and almost missed it. The fans seemed very much disappointed over the conspicuous absence of Walter Johnson, but Bucky

Harris decided year before last not to have any chance on the condition of the "big gun" by using him in exhibition games.

The irrepressible antics of Nick Altrock, Washington's inimitable clown, received a good hand from the crowd as did those of his running mate, Al Schacht. Altrock's slow motion picture act and Schacht's band-leading role kept the crowd roaring laughter just before the game started.

The Senators started a bombardment in the first inning that was good for four runs, enough to win the game handsily. Earl McNeely, whose timely hit in the final inning was instrumental in winning the crown the Senators now wear, started today's game with a clean triple. "Bucky" Harris, who was in the dugout when he came up as second hitter and was safe when Pinelli, at third threw wild to first. A fusillade of base hits followed and the game was won right quick.

McNeely Fielding Star.
McNeely was also the fielding star of the game, snagging six bawls chances without a bobbie. In addition to his triple to start the game, he got two more singles out of four times up.

Rube Bressler, who hurled stellar ball for Atlanta back in 1917, played first base for the Cincinnati club this afternoon. When Rube joined the Reds it seems that he could not stand the pace as a pitcher but was a good hitter and was shifted to the outfield and later to first base, where he remained and made good. Relative to Little Nelson Leach, who is trying out with the Crackers as a second baseman, Niehoff today said: "If Leach proves to be a better second baseman than I, then he will get the job and I will manage from the bench."

One thing is certain, we will have a versatile team this year. Murphy can play first base, third base or the outfield. I can play second or third or the outfield. At any rate, we won't be caught out this time."

T. N. T., REDS CITY TOURNEY WINNERS

BY ROY WHITE.

T. N. T. and Y. M. C. A. Reds were victors last night in the first round of the city amateur basketball tournament now being played on the Central Y. M. C. A. court. The Reds defeated the Tech Freshmen, 29 to 26, and T. N. T. eliminated College Park by a 26 to 22 score.

The T. N. T. and College Park teams played on even terms all during the first half and when the half ended the score was tied with 11 points each.

Early in the second half T. N. T. forged into the lead only to have the score tied by College Park near the middle of the half. With eight minutes left to play the T. N. T. quint sprang a rally that netted eight points in quick succession and it looked as if a decided score was to result but College Park began to shoot wildly from all parts of the court and when the pistol ended the game only four points were separating the two teams.

Score at Half—College Park, 11; T. N. T., 11.

The Y. M. C. A. Reds completely stopped the attack of the Tech Freshmen and won the first game of the city amateur basketball tournament by a 29 to 26 score.

The Reds easily outscored the Tech youngsters in every department of play. Joe McCrory, at right forward, for the winners, was the shining light in the victory with 13 points to his credit. Not only was he scoring the best but his passing and floorwork was also exceptional. He was good at all times. C. P. Bumstead and Bill Barrett all fall to impress the Sox pilot.

Ray Schalk is counted on to catch at least half the games and Clyde Crouse seems ready to relieve him capably.

And if the veteran red-headed Faber will do a comeback and young Charles Robertson find a way to get his off year Deacon Eddie will be sitting pretty, he feels sure.

Last year Hollister, Thurston, W. B. Hardesty, and other members of the team were in the fourth place, but Ted Lyons was the only other pitcher to work in more than 10 full games. He won 12 games and lost one less.

The veteran Faber turned in nine victories, but was killed 11 times. Robertson won but four and lost 10.

Connelly worked in 44 games, but was only seven and lost six. Leverette and Cvenros each contributed two or three victories and Mangum but one.

Faber suffered from a splintered elbow bone. Robertson failed to hit in 10 full games.

In 1923 Faber won 14 and lost 11 games for the disorganized Sox. Robertson won 13 and lost 10.

Robertson's work last season was especially disappointing. His no-hit game, pitched against the Tigers at Detroit April 20, 1922, had drawn the attention of the baseball world.

Robertson was just one of the players who had faced him—only to find themselves eating in harmless kitty fashion from his hand.

Of course, critics realized that the game would not make him—that he was a youngster and had much to learn. But the stuff he displayed was expected, as some members said to favor the Nichols property on Brown's Mill road.

It is considered certain that city council will accept the offer Monday, although some opposition is expected, as some members said to favor the Nichols property on Brown's Mill road.

Mr. Candler has offered to give the city free use of the field for five years on payment of taxes, with the privilege of purchasing the property for $100,000 at expiration of the term.

Collins Counts on Them

BY NORMAN E. BROWN.

Eddie Collins, preparing for his premier as big league manager and pilot of the White Sox, is counting on Urban Faber and Charles Robertson in his scheme of things the coming season.

Collins is satisfied with his outfield with Hooper, Falk, Mostil, Eish and Archdeacon, all rarities to go. His infield lacks a star shortstop, but Harvey McClellan can fill the bill again of "Pie" Davis, Wojack, Carizzo and Bill Barrett all fall to impress the Sox pilot.

Ray Schalk is counted on to catch at least half the games and Clyde Crouse seems ready to relieve him capably.

And if the veteran red-headed Faber will do a comeback and young Charles Robertson find a way to get his off year Deacon Eddie will be sitting pretty, he feels sure.

Child-birth

Here is a wonderful message to all expectant mothers!

When the Little One arrives, you can have that moment more free from suffering than you have perhaps imagined.

An eminent physician, expert in this science, has shown the way. It was he who first produced the great remedy "Mother's Friend."

Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa.

"With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse and then they had to use the instruments, but with my last two children I used 'Mother's Friend' and had only one hour of pain."

"I was not very sick—only about 15 minutes. Use 'Mother's Friend'—it will start today, and meanwhile write to Bradfield Regulator Co., B.A. 46, Atlanta, Ga. for a free illustrated booklet containing information every expectant mother should have. 'Mother's Friend' is sold by all drug stores—everywhere."

The weekly issue of Liberty carries a beautiful photograph of Miss Charlotte Merriam, the lovely young Miss Merriam will leave Atlanta on Sunday to spend several days in Louisville, Ky., with a school-mate, and from there she will stop in Kansas City, Mo., before resuming her journey to California, and to again begin work with the Vitagraph company. BEAUTY CHATS BY EDNA K. FORBES.

WAIST BENDING.

The only trouble with this new need anything in the way of corset for corsetless figures is that some woman let the waistline spread. It's like going without shoes, which may or may not be a healthy habit, but which will spread the feet. Never let the waist grow large, all lines of youth and grace depart when that happens.

Better yet, exercise, so you won't I am not, and never have been, an advocate of the corset. It's artificial, it gives tailored, but unnaturally stiff lines; not even the finest of boned corsets can lend real grace to the figure. Corsets are useful only when the figure needs reducing, or weak muscles need supporting, or when the figure is growing, and they hold in the waist and hips to slender lines, or when it's hopelessly thin and they supply a shape that doesn't exist.

The newer corsets, which aren't corsets at all, are more attractive. I mean the surgical silk elastic ones, either entirely unboned or with a couple of small bones and a band of non-stretchable muslin over the abdomen. These allow the figure its natural lines, allow the body freedom of movement, and at the same time, if a corset or a support is needed at all, they will supply it. They will keep the waist from spreading too.

Stand with your hands over your head, arms stretched up as straight as you can reach. Bend, keeping the knees stiff, and touch the floor with your fingertips. In time, you can touch the floor with the flat part of the palms. Stand with hands over the hips, and bend forward, backward, to the left, to the right. Vary by swinging the upper part of the body around from the waist, keeping the lower part as immovable as possible. Practice before a mirror when you can, you can watch your progress, and you can see whether you are doing the exercises correctly.

Mary and Kate—Unless there is excessive amount of falling hair, there is no need to worry about it. Some hair must fall out, and it is essential that it does it to maintain a healthy growth for new hair must come in, and the falling of the old hair makes a place for the new. If you are not having a new growth, you will have to simulate the action of the scalp with daily massage and a suitable tonic several times each week.

Middle Aged—There is no reason why you should not learn to swim at any age, and the fact that you want to do it, should be sufficient inducement.

Tomorrow—Some Don'ts to Remember.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

ARE YOU DISTRESSED AFTER EATING?

Orlando, Fla.—"Indigestion and constipation have been my trouble for several years. I had an unpleasant belching after eating and would suffer great pain. My bowels refused to function sometimes for days without assistance. I would have dizzy spells so that I had to sit down to prevent falling. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets for just such trouble as mine and was induced to try them. These little things have brought to me a new outlook on life, for I can eat and enjoy my food and my bowels will act in the most natural way. I never knew there was anything on the market like these little 'Pellets.' I would have every one know of them."—Albert H. You Save Money When You Use Morning Joy Coffee

The average coffee on the market gives about 40 cups to the pound. From many tests, repeated time and again, it has been found that Morning Joy Coffee gives 50 cups to the pound—the coffee when made being of the same strength. In other words, a can of Morning Joy Coffee makes 25% more coffee of the same strength than does a can of other brands. The reason is that Morning Joy Coffee is packed in a vacuum can which is air-tight and which holds indefinitely all of the original qualities of the coffee.

Aroma—Flavor—Strength

All come to you in your cup of coffee when it is made from Morning Joy. Although costing a few cents a pound more, it is cheaper in the long run than ordinary brands. It is really the economical coffee to use because it gives more cups to the pound—you use less. And above all, when you use Morning Joy you get a delightful blend which affords joy in every drink. Order Morning Joy from your grocer. It costs less per cup.

Robert B. Mantell.
(Coming to the Atlanta.)

Supplementing his very successful season in Canada and the northern states, the eminent Shakespearean interpreter, Robert B. Mantell, has been persuaded to undertake a special spring tour of the south, and will be seen at the Atlanta theater throughout the coming week, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Mr. Mantell had planned to take a trip to Europe and spend the summer in the land of his birth, where he was christened Robert Bruce, in memory of Scotland's royal hero, but the demand of the land where he has gained fame and fortune came first in his mind. Mr. Mantell's present tour is under the management of Robert Downing, who as "The Gladiator" and "The Virginian" was long a favorite on the heroic stage, where later he received "Ten Nights in a Barroom." The repertoire for the week is as follows: Monday and Wednesday nights, "Richard III." Tuesday and Saturday nights, "Macbeth." Wednesday matinee and Friday night, "As You Like It." Thursday night and Saturday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice." Seats are now on sale.

"Merely Mary Ann."
(At the Lyric.)

"Merely Mary Ann," the play of the week at the Lyric theater, is proving to be a happy and very delightful bit of sentiment that is evidently meeting with the approval of everyone. It's story is built around the life of a little English servant girl, who finally comes into her own through the inheritance of a large fortune and the love of a man whom she has adored for years.

Miss Helen Joy, leading woman of the Lyric Players, and Fred Raymond, leading man, are cast in the principal roles.

"Loew's Vaudeville."

(At Loew's Grand.)

Madeline Berio's beautiful queens of the water will be in Atlanta only two days more, plunging in graceful and thrillingly beautiful dives into a specially built diving tank. The most daring stunt of the season is Miss Berio's high dive from the very top of the lofty theater. Comedy reels through the other acts of the program, with a black face number by Romaine and Castle in which the most gorgeous gown ever worn on an Atlanta stage is displayed. It is solid with rhinestones, weighs nearly 100 pounds and sparkles with a thousand colored lights. Madeline and her partner are delighting grownups and children alike. Also two other acts and feature picture, "Green."

Double Bill.

(At the Metropolitan.)

The main feature at the Metropolitan is Irving Cummings' first picture for first national, "In Every Woman's Life," in which Virginia Valli is called upon to show her very best talent as an actress of every emotion, and she succeeds in doing just this. In "The Swan," which is a remake of Harold Lloyd in "Nevada," she will see it the first time it was run. The feature gives the lovers of horse racing a real thrill.

The Swan.

(At the Lyric.)

Frances Howard, making her Atlanta screen debut in "The Swan," at the Lyric theater, is assured of a high standing in the motion picture world if the impression she has made on Lyric patrons holds her over the country. The stage star makes an ideal "Princess" in "The Swan." Addable Menjou, Ricardo Cortez and Clara Eames are other great names in the cast.

The first number of the "Telephone Girl" series is on the current Lyric program.

MUSICAL DANCING

ACT HEADS BILL

AT KEITH THEATER

Headed by an act presenting pretty Nella Arnaut and her younger brothers in their number entitled "Musical Dancology," the vaudeville ensemble at Keith's Forsyth theater the last half of the week is brim full of novelty, surprise and worthwhile numbers.

The versatile Queenie Duncanson opens the bill with a song and dance number, then cavorts on the tight wire and finally does some thrilling bicycle stunts.

Following her are two ducky "Southern Syncopators"—Fred Bernard and Sid Garay—whose southern songs and impersonations are pleasing.

Then comes Lulu Moores and Glenn Eastman in a particularly novel and entertaining act which they term "Bargains."

Harry and Emma Sharrock spring a most novel surprise with a remarkable dog clairvoyant act, accompanied by clever dialogue banter.

The Arnaut trio set the audience in a roar of applause with their feats of acrobatic dancing.

Aesop's Fables and Pathe News conclude the program.

IN YEAR FRIDAY

COMES ON 13TH

If you said, "Pooh! Pooh!" or in other words verbally thumbed your nose at Friday, the 13th of February, and got away with it, just watch your step today, which is Friday the 13th all over again.

It is reported that the day's hoodlums, angry at revealing the hare has on his last day of opportunity, is out to get some of the scoffers. So if you would be dead certain to avoid yawning, man-hole covers and falling safes and ladders, it might be just as well to stay in bed.

This business of Friday the thirteenth coming two months in succession is quite unusual. There have been three such ominous dates in one year's time, the first one in June, 1924. The next will come in November.

Atlanta Chapter, U. D. C., Backs President's Memorial Stand

Action taken by Mrs. John A. Perdue, president of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., was endorsed by the chapter at its meeting held yesterday afternoon in its chapter house. An address by Mrs. Hattie A. Hounsaville, of Rome, Ga., past president general and past state president, in which she urged that the Stone Mountain Memorial stand taken in the matter by the Atlanta chapter was another feature of the meeting. These incidents are covered more fully elsewhere in this issue.

Owing to the death of W. F. Plane, only son of Mrs. C. C. Plane, the elaborate plans laid by the U. D. C. to celebrate her 57th birthday were not put into effect. Instead sympathy and commendation of her work were tenderly expressed. Much praise was given to Mrs. Perdue for her efficient leadership in the chapter, many members harmonized and praised her voice of appreciation.

Mrs. A. S. Word, of Richmond, Va., brought to the chapter a message of love and indorsement from Mrs. Norman Randolph, also of Virginia. Mrs. Beson spoke of the literature sent out, it was claimed, by the Stone Mountain Memorial association, which is being profusely spread over her home state, Arkansas. In explaining some of this literature Mrs. Sykes said: "Borglum destroyed the faces of the two angels at Saint John's the Divine for the sole purpose of changing feminine features on masculine faces. The purpose of the memorial association is to restore the faces of the angels to the church. He did no more."

Burned Evidence

By MRS. WILSON WOODROW

SYNOPSIS.

The story is being told by young Dandridge, junior member of a New York firm of lawyers. Old Jerome Fodick, one of the richest clients of the firm, invites Dandridge to lunch at his home. The young lawyer is interested in the old man's granddaughter, Sara, a beautiful young society woman, who is Fodick's sole heir. Fodick tells Dandridge that Sara's father, his only son, had spent many years in South America, where he died. After his death a South American woman appeared at the Fodick home with baby Sara, whose mother, the nurse said, had died soon after the baby's father. Fodick had investigated the woman's story and found it to be true.

After luncheon Miss Adelbert, a famous psychic, calls on Fodick and tells him she had seen an intimate friend of Sara's mother in Buenos Aires, when Sara was an infant, and that when she had had to leave the city on a theatrical tour she had left with Sara's mother all her jewels and a large sum of money. When she returned to Buenos Aires Fodick was dead and her property had disappeared. She had just succeeded in tracing them and she demands that Fodick return her jewels and the money with interest. Fodick refuses and makes some reference to a scarred Spaniard which obviously frightens her. A few days later the old man is found dead in his car. The case is in the hands of Police Inspector Curran. Dandridge tells him about Miss Adelbert's demands and informs him that the medium had carried with her a list of jewels which had belonged to Sara's mother and written in the latter's handwriting. Identical to a list in Sara's possession. Before Dandridge is able to have Fodick's safe—which contains important letters—opened, it is mysteriously drilled and rifled. Curran and Dandridge hasten over to the Fodick house and find that the letters are missing. The inspector questions Herbert, curator of the Fodick museum, and the old man's secretary, Miss O'Connor. Both have good alibis. Herbert claims she spent the hours between 4 and 11 at the home of Professor Markham, but admits he allowed a Professor Guilely, known to him slightly, to remain in the museum alone during the afternoon.

Achison, a famous criminal lawyer of New York, is Adelbert's attorney. He invites Dandridge to dinner at his apartment and there informs the young lawyer that his client is about to sue Sara Fodick for the money and jewels she claims she left with Sara's mother. Dandridge goes to the Fodick house to warn her. While there Curran telephones to say that Herbert had been killed on the street between the Fodick house and his office. Miss O'Connor faints at the news, under the impression that the victim is her brother, Lord Harry, and not Herbert. She revives when Lord Harry walks into the house. Sara had engaged him to open the safe for her, but he found the safe had already been opened. The next day the professor calls at Dandridge's office and gives him a picture of a Spaniard autographed "Eugenio de Guzman y Manara," which Herbert had left at the professor's house. It is a photograph of the scarred Spaniard that Fodick had mentioned in Adelbert. Dandridge calls on the Spanish consul. He arranged to meet Graham Smith, in whom he had confided his suspicions about Adelbert, and passes on to him the information he received at the consul's office.

INSTALLMENT XXXV. CROSS PURPOSES.

After a slight interruption I resumed my story to Graham Smith. "The general left one son—the old man died about two years ago—but he entered the church, and they do not know where he may be. But I have cabled to Madrid for full information."

"Quick work," Graham remarked, "and you'll get a quick answer—from Spain. I should say in about three months."

"You're so sunny, Smith; always cheerful and inspiring, but this time your cooing doesn't affect me, for the person I cabled to was not a Spaniard, but our old classmate, 'Skates' Conger. He has been secretary of the legation over there for the last four years, and if he's anything like as inquisitive as he used to be in college, he knows the unwritten secret memoirs of every person of prominence in the country."

"That," Graham conceded, "is more like it. If 'Skates' doesn't know the size of the late general's shoes and his preference in breakfast foods, it would be because the general didn't wear shoes or eat breakfast. Really, you couldn't have gone to a better shop, Tony."

We finished our luncheon and walked back to my office to find that an answer to my cabled inquiry had just come in.

"Good old 'Skates'!" I exclaimed as I tore it open. "Right up to the minute. No manana for la manana theory for him."

But, as I read it, my elation evaporated. Smith saw from my face that something was wrong.

I passed the cablegram over to him and he read it aloud.

"Unable to communicate with Primo de Guzman y Manara, as he entered Trappist monastery two years ago, and is under vows of silence. Even his place of retreat unknown. As to subject of inquiry can only give you a mass of hearsay and gossip which cannot be confirmed. Latter part of life appears to have been clouded by domestic tragedies, but too proud to have any confidants. Single known fact I can give is that only daughter ran away from home, and became a dancer at low cantinas and cabarets. Said to have got into trouble with the police, and to have left the country either under the protection of or married to young American, and to have died later in South America. For possible particulars refer you to a relative, Juan Manara, importer, 350 Beaver street, New York."

Graham's face was impenetrable as he finished, but I knew what he was thinking, and his thoughts were mine. Instead of helping us, this information seemed to strengthen and reinforce the claims of Adelbert. And I was swept by the desolating knowledge of the blow this revelation would be to Sara.

I looked up to find Smith's eyes on me, and felt a sudden, violent impulse to smash him in the face. I knew from that gleam in them just what he was thinking; that the adventures of Sara's mother would give added sensationalism and piquancy to his newspaper story when it came to be written; but second thoughts prompted me to control my ungrateful and homicidal desires. After all, Graham had been useful, and might be more so.

"Trust Conger to pick up any rotten, backstairs gossip that's around," I said bitterly.

Smith was silent, and I got into my overcoat and picked up my hat. "I am going down to see this Juan Manara or whatever his name is."

I glanced again at Conger's message to note the address, and put it in my pocket.

"Want me to go along," Smith asked.

I did not, and told him so, although I expressed it more diplomatically, saying that when he found it was a family matter on which I had come to interview him, Juan Manara might presumably be extremely reticent; in fact, he might even resent my inquiries; and if I appeared accompanied by Smith, a newspaper man, he would probably shut up like a clam.

Graham accepted this, and I started off alone; but it struck me presently that a witness might be advisable. Foreigners, too, are apt to have a respect for the physical embodiment of the law. So I stopped at Curran's office to see if he could go with me.

He looked up from his desk as I came in, and nodded distantly. "Sit down," his tone was as frosty as my manner. "I was thinking of either going to see you or asking you to come here, whichever was most convenient." He leaned back in his chair and looked at me steadily, a wrinkle between his brows. "I am a great believer in co-operation, as you probably know, and I have not been getting it. If you and Miss Fodick think you can handle this case better than I can, I am ready to retire and give you free swing; but I can't go on with all of us playing at cross purposes as we are now."

"I don't blame you, Inspector," for feeling as you do, but there was no intention of setting you aside as the directing head."

"What else can you call it, when you and Miss Fodick follow up some lead of your own and leave me in the dark about it? Not a word to me when I dropped in there last night, and you," his hard, sharp eyes bored through me, "even tried to fix it so that my men wouldn't report that another person was spending the evening with you; a notorious crook, by the way."

Before I could say anything there was a ring on the telephone; and, as sometimes happens, the words of the message were quite audible to me, although I was a foot or two away from the instrument.

"This is Sara Fodick, Inspector," the voice, brassy and metallic, anything but Sara's rasped on my ear. "I hear you have been interviewing L. H. today and that he was rather uncommunicative. So stupid of him, for, of course, you should know everything that happens, and I am sure none of us dreamed of leaving you in the dark. We all rely on you too thoroughly."

Even the quick and rattle of the telephone could not destroy that note of soft persuasion which Sara could make so effective.

"But," she went on, "things have been happening so fast that we have hardly had time to catch our breaths, and we felt so important, too; we thought we had so much to tell you. But, of course, you had to get ahead of us and spoil our little triumph with your darned shrewdness. How did you ever discover that L. H. had been at the house last night? Can't you come up now and let me tell you all about it? Or perhaps it would be more convenient for you to see Mr. Dandridge."

"Mr. Dandridge is here now," he answered.

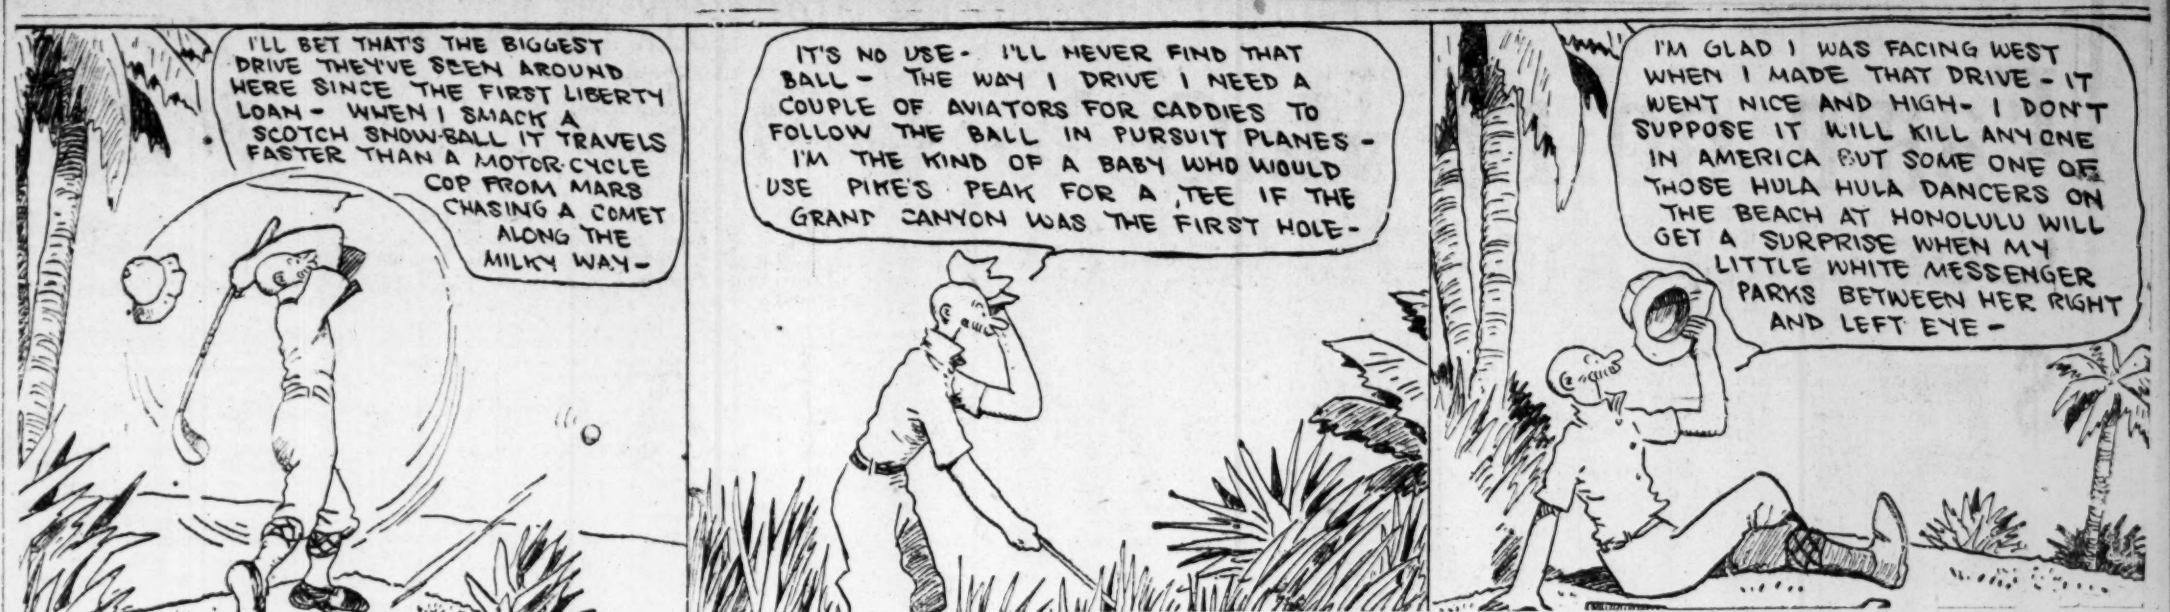

"Splendid. Tell him to explain the whole thing to you. We are anxious to have your opinion of it. Good-bye."

"I couldn't help overhearing," I said as he hung up the receiver, "so I'll follow orders and go ahead."

Our furnace man is an Irish man: Sometimes, when I have home work, My father works with me And when he gets the answers He's happy as can be. But when they don't come out right He sings a different song: "Such questions are outrageous," Or else, "The book is wrong." —Virginia Bower.

DR. BALDPAPE'S FLEETNESS OF FOOT.
Apparently there is no sport that Dr. George A. Baldpate has not indulged in. Yesterday, in talking to Gordon Hurler, he said: "This Paavo Nurmi is quite a runner. I should like to have met him 30 years ago, only he wasn't quite born at that time."

"You ran?" he was asked. "Did I run?" repeated the "Doc." "Did I... listen. I ran so much and so far... you see, I owed so much money in my home town that I had to keep running all the time. Finally I was forced into the woods. "I lived in a little shack up in the Michigan peninsula. There I gained a great reputation as a hunter and guide. Parties used to come up from Detroit and Grand Rapids. Then Envy stepped in... you know how it is... the very men who had hunted with me claimed that I got all the best shots because I used to out-run the deer and moose and pot them at close range.

"I was very bitter about this for a while, but got over it. The next crowd that came out were enthusiastic about their sport. The game seemed to come directly at them. And no wonder. I was circling the animals, 'heading' them and driving them towards my friends. I never told, and they used to josh me on my bad luck, but it built up a tremendous business for me and laid the foundations of my present fortune."

Had Their Troubles.

Jury of Six Tries Cady for Murder Of N. B. Broward

Orlando, Fla., March 12.—The testimony of six witnesses had been taken in the trial of Hal D. Cady, on trial here on a charge of murder in the second degree, in connection with the slaying last November of N. B. Broward in the Cady home when court adjourned late today.

Testimony regarding the conversation between Cady and his wife, was ruled out by Judge W. L. Tilden, when defense counsel cited a supreme court ruling that conversation between husband and wife, carried out without the knowledge of the presence of a third party, "is considered sacred and therefore inadmissible."

Cassidy, policeman, who first learned of the killing, had testified that he stood for sometime outside the bathroom of the Cady home and that he heard Cady say to his wife: "I beamed him," when defense counsel objected. The objection was sustained.

An unusual feature of the trial is the fact that only six jurors will decide the case. Investigation developed that there is a provision in the criminal code here that the abbreviated jury sits in all trials for less than a capital offense.
